

Econ Essay 2019-2020 Due: 13 Mar 2020
Robots: Will robots be doing your job in 2030?

The world is evolving at a rapid pace, and advances in computer and robotics technology are amazing. Based on past events though, this is not necessarily a good thing for the average worker. While technology makes our lives easier/better (for the most part), robots and computers also replace workers. Going back to the beginnings of the industrial revolution, machines have been replacing people in jobs. While more jobs have been created, it is always a disruptive element, and many people never are able to transition to the newer economy and are left behind. The question for this essay is, "To what extent will robots replace humans in the workforce of 2029, and does this mean mass unemployment? How will we adjust to the future, or are the machines taking over?"
